

Text-dependent questions

Let's remember that critical readers and writers look closely at stories and use this information in their thinking, discussions, and writing. As critical readers, thinkers, and writers, we are going to read different stories to learn information about this topic to answer this guiding question: What can we learn from other people's lives? As we read the anchor texts in this unit, let's think of information or ideas we can learn from the text that will help us answer this guiding question, what can we learn from other people's lives?

Re-read the story. Then, complete the third step of the Close Reading process 3. Use annotations and text-dependent questions to collect information and check student understanding.

Now let's think about the key details of the story. Think about this text-dependent question: What did the author, and illustrator Jennifer K. Mann, tell you about what you need to go on a camping trip? Close your eyes and massage your brains and think about your answer. What can we learn from the author of this story about what we need on a camping trip? Be ready to share with a partner. Turn to a new partner (different from our last session) and take turns sharing your thinking.

DO

Listen as students share to assess student understanding of a text read aloud or information presented orally or through other media by asking and answering questions about key details and requesting clarification if something is not understood.

SAY

This was awesome information! Let's go back to the text and annotate the evidence we have to support our thinking.

Model for students how to connect their retelling of the story to evidence from the text.

Open-ended response —

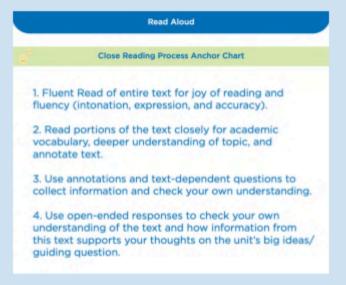

Complete the fourth step of the Close Reading process 4. Use open-ended responses to check for student understanding of text and how information from this text supports their thoughts on the unit's big ideas/guiding question.

Think about this text-dependent question: What can we learn from the author of this story about what we need on a camping trip? Close your eyes and massage your brains and think about your answer. What can we learn from author about the fun things we can do on a camping trip? Use your Non-Fiction Graphic Organizer to draw pictures of the your response to the text-dependent question.

Rotate and support student thinking with probing questions like:

- · What did the text tell you?
- What do we need to take with us on a camping trip?
- What are some fun things we can do on a camping trip based on the information in the story?

Provide support to students as needed and allow students to dictate responses to the teacher (write student words below each of their drawings for the story)
