

Close reading

We are going to sing our read aloud song. "It's time to read a story! A story, a story! It's time to read a story and learn something new!" Remember that as critical readers, thinkers, and writers, we are going to read different stories to learn information to help us answer this guiding question: What can we learn from nature? As we read the anchor texts in this unit, let's think of information or ideas we can learn from the text that will help us answer this guiding question. Let's get started! We are going to enjoy an exciting story today, Bugs for Lunch by Margery Facklam. Let's listen to the story and learn some more exciting facts about bugs and nature.

Complete the first step of the Close Reading process 1. Fluent Read of entire text for joy of reading and fluency (intonation, expression, and accuracy).

Peer discussion ____

Now we are going to go back to a few pages and look closely at the pictures and words to help us understand the story.

DO

Complete the second step of the Close Reading process 2. Read portions of the text closely for academic vocabulary, deeper understanding of topic, and annotate text.

SAY

In the story, different animals and bugs are explored and what they like to eat. Did you know there are some bugs people think are yummy and enjoy eating too? Look at the text (or words) on page 5 and say the word cruise. Cruise in this sentence means that the bat flew by smoothly with ease. Turn to the person next to you and share what you learned about bugs from the story.

Listen as students share to assess students ability to ask and answer questions about key details in a text read aloud or information presented orally or through other media.

Text-dependent questions

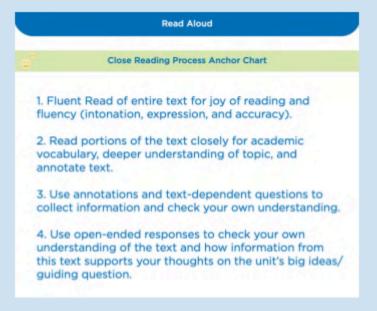

Complete the third step of the Close Reading process 3. Use annotations and text-dependent questions to collect information and check students understanding.

Now let's think about the key details of the story. Think about this text-dependent question: Describe the connection between two bugs or pieces of information in the story. Use key details and evidence from the story to support your thinking. Close your eyes and massage your brains and think about your answer. Be ready to share with a partner. Turn to the person next to you and take turns sharing your thinking.

Listen as students share to assess students ability to ask and answer questions about key details in a text read aloud or information presented orally or through other media.